Dragonfly Graphics

RESTORATION
DIGITAL PAINTING
GRAPHIC DESIGN

*Robert Crowley
our Dad, taken about 1872. age 5 years.*

The story behind this photo just made me fall in love with this little boy.

The original is a tintype, notorious for rust or discoloration from residual chemicals. Tintypes were American's first inexpensive way of getting a photograph back in the 19th century.

This is Robert. His daughter wrote this note: Taken about 1872. Tin type picture of Robert Crowley, our Dad. Taken when he was about 5 years old. He had been up since 4am as he was determined to go with his father and the other men driving a herd of cattle to Chariton, about 12 miles, walked part of the way, went to sleep while the photographer was getting him ready for the picture.

I LOVE these glimpses back in our history, and the wonderful stories that come with them.
